Mr. Shields thought the bill of Mr. Stubbs, from the Senate, should have come to the House in time to go before the Committee on Chesapeake Bay and Its Tributaries for consideration, and should not be acted upon without knowing whether or not it improved the existing bill, and offered his substitute as a compromise measure, so as to give time to formulate a bill, acceptable to all parties, that could be acted upon during the extra session next fall.

The celebrated case of Mrs. Elizabeth Macauley vs. The Dismal-Swamp Land Company has just been ended. A bill was filed in 1829, and the case has been to the Court of Appeals, and is exten sively reported in Robinson's Reports Since that time it has been going back wards and forwards between the Circuit Court of Williamsburg and the commissioners of the court. The case has outlived a number of commissioners to whom it was referred, and also a considerable number of distinguished lawyers who from time to time were employed in it. In a very full and able opimon delivered on the 4th day of March of this year at Williamsburg by Judge Henley the case was disposed of at last in favor of the heirs of Mrs. Macauley, who had been waiting for so many years for the adjudication of their rights. The opinion of the Court gives to these heirs, some of whom live in Virginia and the others in Baltimore, Md., an amount considerably exceeding $60,000. The counsel in the case were Messrs, J. Alston Cabell and O. G. Kean, of this city, and R. T. Armistead. of Williamsburg, for Mrs. Macauley's heirs, and Walke & Ould for the Dismal-Swamp Land Company.

The usual question was put and the foreman said they had agreed, and that the verdict "Not guilty." Almost every man in the court-room grasped Holland warmly by the hand, and he walked out of the court-house on the arm of his Texan lawyer, Makemson. Holland will leave for Texas in a few days.

The accommodating spirit shown by the leaders of fashion in the spring styles is commendable. So much has been said by the scoffers of the male persuasion against high hats when worn at the theatres that, with the grace and kindliness of the feminine heart, hats are to be lowered half an inch and lavishly trimmed at the back, in order that the person behind may have a pleasant prospect when their view of three years, and at once became very popular in the city. He was regarded as the most learned and eloquent minister in the city, and was loved by everybody except the congregation of St. Luke's. Last August Dr. Armstrong went on a vacation to ('incinnati, and while there was charged with getting drunk and visiting bawdyhouses. He explained by stating that he went at the request of a dear friend in Canada to hunt for the friend's fallen daughter and that he found her. He denied getting drunk, and offered the evidence of Murat Halstead and others to disprove charge. The Ecclesiastical Court tried the case a week in Atlanta, and found him guilty of intoxication and of visiting bawdy-houses, though they agreed ominations.
